MOTHER-DAUGHTER DRAMA: LIGHTS, CAMERA...ANGST?
 SMOTHERLY LOVE'S SIDE-SPLITTING STORIES HELP MOMS LAUGH & LEARN

(Nashville, Tenn.) Moms, have you ever butted heads, locked horns with, or got up in the grill of your daughter? Daughters, have you ever pushed your mom's buttons, tested her patience, rolled your eyes and said, "Whatever?" Of course you have! Mother-daughter drama is as old as dirt and humorist Debi Stack says it's almost as fun!

In Smotherly Love (Thomas Nelson Inc., ISBN# 0-8499-0198-7, $14.99, March 20, 2007), Debi brings us sixteen hilarious "she said/she said" stories from venting mothers and daughters. Every day stories, everyday conflicts – all based on personal interviews – simultaneously strike a chord and tickle the funny bone. Together, they perfectly illustrate the book's subtitle: "I Know Where Your Buttons Are and I'm Not Afraid to Push Them."

Even the table of contents of this great little gift book is irresistible. Its five sections form a reality check based on the most common complaints among mother-daughter duos: She's So Picky, She's So Clueless, She's so Stubborn, She's So Bossy, and She's So Dramatic. Aspiring Retail (February 2007) calls Smotherly Love "delightfully refreshing" and "roll-on-the-floor funny."

"This is far from a solve-it-all-in-one-sitting book," says Stack. "But when you read the stories, as you smile (or gasp), and catch a glimpse of the angst in your own home, you'll find that the reason behind most mother-daughter drama is love. Granted, it's often in a roundabout, convoluted, get-some-counseling kind of way, but it's still love." Ultimately, through Stack's lighthearted but practical advice, the reader gains empowerment to be a better mom.

Debi Stack is a recovering perfectionist, an award-winning writer and professional speaker whose humorous insights into the stress women face have touched audiences around the world. She lives in Kansas City with her husband and son, having recently set her grown daughter free from the grip of Smotherly Love.
